

Since adding our phone numbers to the no "call list" unwanted intrusions on our family time have been dramatically reduced. I need not be concerned when my child answers the phone.

This program is, in my opinion; and that of everyone I've spoken with, a huge success. This topic comes up often in everyday conversation, and always the comments are in favor and gratitude.

I believe that the FCC should consider using Indiana's telephone privacy as a national model! Survey us, ask those on the list how effective this program has been! Then choose it as the national standard! I promise you that no one who has experienced the difference this has made would support any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. We have a GOOD THING happening here. Don't cheapen its success by weakening the protection.
